Chicago Tribune

May 8, 2008

On April 29, 2008, the Chicago Tribune published an editorial essentially stating that Workmen's Compensation adequately protected construction workers that are injured or killed on a work site and that Illinois' pending Construction Safety Act was unnecessary. Philip H. Corboy, Jr., disagreed with the editorial and wrote a letter, Make Work Safe, in favor of the legislation, which was published in the Chicago Tribune, on May 8, 2008.
